A PROMOTER OF GOOD CHEER.

THE WAY SOME PEOPLE AFFECT OTHERS.

"Well, I know how a dog feels when he shows his teeth and bristles up the hair on his back," said one school-teacher to another. "That's the way I feel every time I see Miss Statham. I've added to my morning prayers, 'From meeting Miss Statham, good Lord, deliver me!' A walk with her casts a gloom over my whole day. Yes, she's in our school and I'm not the only one who wishes she wasn't. If the principal had as much power as they say, she'd be somewhere else. I wonder if Dante hasn't anything in his 'Inferno' about people who make you want to fight. If he hasn't, he ought to have. By just talking peace she'd arouse a spirit of martial ardor that would conquer the world."

"Yes, I know I'm bitter, but so would you be. She came into my room and told me right before the children that school was not the place to wear diamonds. I know it is not; very few teachers have them to wear, to tell the truth; but how could I help it, when there was no one at home to take care of my poor little pin? Anyhow, children like to see pretty things; and then, it was none of her business. A person like that is enough to ruin anybody's disposition, I say."

"Why, Willie Stevens, you know Willie Stevens, that dear little mother's only boy? Well, Willie was in the office the other day, looking as determined as Roosevelt. It seems he had absolutely refused to pick up a paper from the floor. It was funny to see him with his jaw set and his eyes flashing. Poor Mr. Sawyer was worried to death. He knew Willie was all right, yet he knew, too, that discipline must be maintained; so there he was."

"Willie was at last induced to speak and he said, half-sobbing, 'I'd pick it up if she asked me to, even if I didn't do it; but I ain't going to do it when she says I must.' And I honored him for his pluck, which I must say I never suspected. But there it is! She can make even him fight."

"Why, do you know, she's a promoter of lying? Yes, you needn't look so astounded and shocked; it's perfectly true. You know how I loved California. Well, she began to praise it, and in an instant, like a panorama, I saw all the disagreeable features of the region, though until that moment I had entirely forgotten them. I saw myself holding my hat with one hand and my skirts with the other, as I went down Market street in August with my teeth chattering. I actually felt the damp clothes I put on every morning. I was again in the room with the others of our party, huddled up with our cloaks on and the gas lit for warmth. When I was there, I thought all those things funny. We had the very jolliest kind of a time, telling our day's experience in those chilly rooms. But only the wish to contradict her was uppermost in my mind."

"And Chinatown! I really hated it; but when she denounced it—well, to hear me then, you would absolutely think the one ambition of my life was to live in one of those oriental, balconied houses lit with lanterns; to roam the quaint streets and to pass my spare time at the grotesque theater. I'm glad my mother didn't hear me. She'd think I was losing my chances for heaven."

"Then she has such a superior air when you tell her a joke. She looks as if you hadn't the normal amount of intellect when you think anything is funny. No one else being near, one day I showed her some sentences written by one of my boys. He was to incorporate 'plum' and 'since' in sentences showing thought. He wrote, 'Tom Thumb had a whole plum pie. He had a since.' She said she couldn't see anything funny about that; and when I elaborately explained that he probably meant Tom had a 'cinch,' she asked what that was, and then said she was surprised at any teacher laughing at slang used by a child."

"You remember how poor little Jimmie Davis, who lives in the alley, loves to adorn himself with anything in the shape of jewelry that he gets hold of? Well, the other day he came to school with a brass ring on his first finger. All the way upstairs he held his hand spread out on his breast, so no one should miss the sight of his treasure; and when I pretended to look over his head, he—accidentally, of course—bumped against me. When I laughed at that she said it was disgusting. Do you know what she made him do? Throw it into the waste basket! Yes, she did. But when I saw him crying, going downstairs, I went and fished it out (she wasn't in the room) and gave it to him. I warned him not to wear it again in school, except at recess and noon. I don't care whether it was right or not. Heavenly jewels couldn't have been more precious to him than that ring; and if his hands are dirty it made no difference. I think such people as Miss Statham ought to be suppressed."

"There she is now. Let's run. Pretend you don't hear her."

"Oh, good morning, Miss Statham. No, I didn't know my dress was sagging in the back. How kind of you to tell me! By the way, how dreadfully unbecoming that hat is to you! People with sallow complexions ought not to wear brown. But I suppose you are practicing economy to make up for your western trip. One of Mrs. Jean's? My dear girl, don't get so angry. Of course, even the best milliners turn out atrocities sometimes. "There, wasn't that awful! I'll be hemoaning my ugly disposition all day. But I just can't help it. She always makes me feel like that."—Chicago Daily News.

Kentucky Farmer Missing.

Henderson, Ky., Jan. 28.—Floyd Sights, a young farmer who lives near here, has been mysteriously missing since last Friday, when he rode to Henderson on horseback and told his wife and child he was coming here on business and would return that night. Nothing has been heard from him since. Mrs. Sights is greatly worried over the disappearance of her husband. Sights is a man of good habits and his family relations have always been pleasant.

True stories of important movements and a good, healthy combat are the dominant traits of McClure's for February. Even after the peep behind the curtains afforded by the sessions of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and of the legislative insurance investigation, and by the upheavals of last Fall's political campaign, there are disclosures in this number concerning railroad abuses, life insurance juggling, and political trickery which will take hard hold of every citizen. There is the case of Everett Colby, "The Gentleman from Essex" told by Lincoln Stephens, which is full of the sturdy effort of honesty and youth. It shows how a young man, with aggressiveness and a conscience can beat the machine to a standstill and wins for himself more than the machine dared give him because he was honest. Ray Stannard Baker, continuing his series, "The Railroads on Trial," tells the astonishing story of how Armour, through his private car line, monopolized the fruit transportation business of America, practically told the railroads that they might as well burn their own refrigerator-cars, and turning to the shipper reaped a golden harvest by daring and open methods. Then he writes of the revolt of honest shippers against Armour.

COMMITTEE'S CALL

For a Democratic Congressional Primary.

At a meeting of the Democratic District Committee for the Second Congressional District of Kentucky, held pursuant to a call of the Hon. R. B. Bradley, chairman of said committee, in the city of Madisonville, Ky., January 18, 1906, the following call was issued:

It is hereby ordered that a primary election be held in all of the precincts of the several counties composing the Second Congressional District on Saturday, May 19, 1906, for the purpose of nominating a Democratic candidate for Congress in said district to be voted for at the regular November election, 1906. Said primary election shall be held under the provisions of the Kentucky Statutes regulating primary elections, between such hours as regular State elections are held.

No candidate in said primary shall be allowed to select as a device the device of the Democratic party.

Each candidate desiring to be voted for at said primary election shall on or before 2 o'clock p. m., April 19, 1906, file with the chairman of the district committee his written request to have his name placed on the ballot for said primary election and shall state whether or not he desires his name to be printed under any device, and if so he shall designate the device so desired by him.

An assessment of $2,500 is hereby fixed for the purpose of defraying the expenses of said election, to be paid by the candidates, and each candidate shall on or before 2 o'clock p. m. April 19, 1906, pay to the chairman of said district committee, his proportionate part of the expenses for holding the said primary election.

The right to vote at said election shall be limited and restricted to those who affiliate in good faith with the Democratic party and further pledge their support to the nominee of said election, and possess the qualifications prescribed by statute, provided, however, that persons under the age of twenty-one years on the date of said election, but who will have reached said age by the date of the November election, 1906, and who wish to affiliate with the Democratic party and will pledge themselves to support the nominee of said primary election, shall be entitled to vote.

Should there be but one candidate complying with the requirements of this call, after 2 p. m., April 19, 1906 there shall be no primary election held under this call, but the Democrat District Committee shall meet upon the call of the chairman at such time and place as he may designate and declare the person complying with the requirements of this call the nominee of the Democratic party for Congress in the Second Congressional District of Kentucky, and the chairman of said committee shall return to him his entrance fee.

The candidate receiving the largest number of legal and qualified votes cast at said election, shall be declared the nominee of the Democratic party of the Second district for representative in Congress.

The District Committee will meet in the city of Henderson, Ky., at 2 o'clock, p. m., on Wednesday, the 23rd day of May, 1906, for the purpose of canvassing returns and issuing certificate of nomination.

In testimony whereof, witness our hands this 18th day of January, 1906.

R. B. BRADLEY, Chairman.
SPALDING TRAFTON, Secretary.

A Habit to Be Encouraged.

The mother who has acquired the habit of keeping on hand a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, saves herself a great amount of uneasiness and anxiety. Coughs, colds, and croup, to which children are susceptible are quickly cured by its use. It counteracts any tendency of a cold to result in pneumonia, and if given it soon as first symptoms of croup appear, it will prevent the attack. This remedy contains nothing injurious and mothers give it to little ones with a feeling of perfect security. Sold by: L. L. Elgin and Anderson & Fowler, Up-to-Date Druggists at Hopkinsville.
